Hundreds of feet in the air. Was it an accident? Or was it a murder? Inspired by classic film noir, this original Limelight radio show follows a group of steelworkers as they stack the beams for the most recognizable structure on the island – The Empire State Building.

Everyone's favorite sleuthing husband-and-wife team are back in the next installment of the Thin Man series. When Nick and Nora Charles visit a racetrack for a relaxing day, they get mixed up in a murder investigation. Another murder? Alright. Who brought the olives?

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Frank Capra's It Happened One Night has had a bit of an odd legacy. In 1934, it became the first of only three films to ever win an Oscar Grand Slam (actor, actress, director, screenplay, picture), though Claudette Colbert hated it so much, she didn't even attend. The scene in which Clark Gable undresses resulted in a massive drop in undershirt sales across the nation. It was even the inspiration for Bugs Bunny, creators citing Shapley's personality and Gabel's carrot-eating fast talk. Capra is perhaps best known for directing It's A Wonderful Life, an important part of Limelight's radio legacy. It is my honor and privilege to work with such an incredible team as we bring more Frank Capra to the Limelight stage. Thank you for your continued support of the arts, and enjoy the show.
