DIRECTOR'S NOTE:

This show is a funhouse mirror. In it, we should see ourselves and the society we inhabit, distorted, twisted, but tragically familiar. The confluence of music, images, confrontation, and the methods of the actors themselves should build to a critical mass, reaching the 'assault on the senses' level. This is Shakespeare as none of us, these actors, directors, Limelight, have ever done it before, which is part of our longstanding commitment to originality. We must challenge ourselves and challenge the audience if we are to remain a place for strong original perspectives. One last thing: if you feel uncomfortable at any point during the show – unnerved, unsettled, displaced – ask yourself why. And then, when you leave the theatre tonight, take those feelings with you.
