Director's Note

This season is all about “why we tell the story,” and I have the unique opportunity to share one of my very own original stories with you this summer. This is my first solo playwriting experience, and I am thrilled to share it with such a wonderful collection of young performers. “Quest” is a play that tackles the notions of the traditional fairy tale. Does a prince have to rescue a princess? What if he doesn’t want to? What if you cannot be the very best? What if you cannot be perfect? Is there such a thing as perfection? Can we find love in situations we fight against? Can parents make as many mistakes as children? And, finally, do any of these questions really matter? Is it important to find answers, or is it more important to simply continue the search, experiencing life one moment at a time? I hope that this play provides you with a light-hearted and heart-felt chance to discuss these ideas and think about what it means to grow, venturing through life one step at a time.

-Michael Leali
